REPUBLICAN WOMEN

Happy New Year!

President's Voice

Happy New Year BARW!

I hope everyone had a joyous holiday season and that you are refreshed, revitalized and ready to hit the ground running in 2023.

There is a Friedrich Nietzsche quote that kind of sums up the year we are facing.

"There will always be rocks in the road ahead of us. They will be stumbling blocks or steppingstones; it all depends on how you use them."

We had some rocks in the House of Representatives last week, but they were used as steppingstones to perhaps have a more transparent and responsible governing body. A House that is not afraid to tackle the hard issues, a House that will get back to regular order, a House that will have a Speaker who will take on the Washington establishment instead of acquiescing to it. We will keep a watchful eye and hold our representatives accountable.

We have the Texas Legislature in session this year. Let's hope they will find a way to smooth the path and do what is best for Texas. See the Legislative report for the rocks in the road there. Once again, we will be vigilant.

We also have more than a dozen contested election races in Harris County. At least 11 judicial candidates and Alexandra Mealer have filed. Let's hope we will have some of the races overturned and the truth will come out about the county's conduct on Election Day.

So, lace up those hiking boots and get ready to turn stumbling blocks into stepping stones!

I hope to see you all at our meeting on January 24th.

Highlights from Egg Nog Party - December 7, 2022

A very special thank you to

Mary and Wynn McMullen

for opening their home to BARW for the Egg Nog Party. Their beautiful home, enchantingly decorated for the holidays, was a festive, joyful setting to celebrate our 2022 year.

Next Meeting - January 24, 2023

Robert Lawson

Clinical Professor - Jerome M. Fullinwider Centennial Chair in Economic Freedom

Robert Lawson holds the Jerome M. Fullinwider Centennial Chair in Economic Freedom and is director of the Bridwell Institute for Economic Freedom in the Cox School of Business at Southern Methodist University. He earned his PhD and MS in Economics from Florida State University and his BS in Economics from the Honors Tutorial College at Ohio University. He previously taught at Auburn University, Capital University, and Shawnee State University.

Dr. Lawson is a founding co-author of the Fraser Institute's Economic Freedom of the World annual report, which presents an economic freedom index for over 160 countries. Lawson has authored or co-authored over 100 academic publications. With Benjamin Powell, he is co-author of the Amazon Bestseller, Socialism Sucks: Two Economists Drink Their Way Through the Unfree World (Regnery Publishing). Lawson's research has been cited over 12,000 times according to Google Scholar.

Lawson is past-president of the Association of Private Enterprise Education, a Senior Fellow at the Fraser Institute, and a member of the Mont Pelerin Society. He has won the Adam Smith Award from the Association of Private Enterprise Education.

Personal: Lawson is married to the talented choreographer and writer, Tracy Lawson, and has one daughter, Kerianne, who is an economics professor at North Dakota State University. In his spare time, he enjoys playing vintage base ball, hiking, running, cooking, working on his VW bugs, and watching sports of all kinds. He loves Cincinnati chili, the Bengals, and the Reds.

Issues for the 88th Texas Legislature

Fiscal

- Texas will have a large budget surplus, projected to be more than $27 billion. The exact amount will not be known until the Comptroller releases the Biennial Revenue Estimate on January 9th.
- From the projected budget surplus, many areas are hoping to see increased funding, but I believe the largest expenditure of the surplus will be some form of Property Tax Relief.
- Beyond Property Tax Relief, other big-ticket items include:
 - Infrastructure spending
 - Public Education and Health and Human Services will continue to be approx. 2/3 of the Budget
 - As part of this School Safety will receive a lot of funding
 - Increased funding for Operation LoneStar and other state programs geared toward protecting the southern border
 - Salary Increases for State employees who have been hurt by inflation and cost of living increases in Austin
 - ERS/TRS pension increases
 - IT modernization of state agencies

Non-Fiscal Issues

- Social Issues will continue to be a significant part of the session. These include bills on abortion, religion, and transgender people.
- Parents' Rights and school choice will be huge issues this session. The Senate will be pushing school vouchers, but it is yet to be seen if enough rural republicans in the House will support a voucher bill
- Election integrity will continue to be an issue though I believe much less so than the last session, as we see how the election law from Special Session is implemented.
- Electricity and strengthening of the grid will continue to be issues.
- ESG is going to be talked about at length as it becomes an even bigger issue nationally
- Gambling will be an issue that is brought up this session, but the Lt. Governor has been very clear that he doesn't support gambling, so I don't see it going anywhere.

Volunteer Hours and Calls

Don't Forget to Log Your Volunteer Hours!

Just a reminder that January 15 will be our next reporting date for our volunteer hours and for calls made during the fourth quarter of 2022. Please send me your hours no later than January 14. Also, as a refresher, we can now count the time attending our general meetings and we can count the hours working at the polls even though they are paid hours so long as it is not the regular employment of the member. We can now also submit the number of calls made on behalf of a candidate or regarding a political issue, but here again, these calls cannot be counted if it is the regular employment of the member. Under the new rules, we are allowed to report any hours not reported from July 1, 2021 to the present, however, when reporting your hours just let me know the month and year or the quarter and year during which the volunteer hours were earned and the calls were made. Many of our members do not report their hours, consequently, too many hours go unreported, so please think back and give me your best estimate of the number of volunteer hours and the number of calls made. Give yourself and BARW credit for all the hours you devote.

1. What is Fentanyl?

Fentanyl is nearly always described with the following three words: Powerful. Synthetic. Opioid. Let's look at these terms in reverse order.

Opioid: Fentanyl belongs to the class of drugs called opioids, which are used to reduce pain. This category also includes morphine, oxycodone and heroin. Of these, fentanyl is one of the most potent, and is approved for medical use as a surgical anesthetic or for people with chronic pain (typically terminal cancer patients). Opioids reduce physical and emotional/psychological pain and can have a euphoric effect in high doses, which is why people sometimes misuse opioids.

Synthetic: Unlike morphine and heroin, fentanyl is not derived from the opium poppy. Rather, it is a synthetic product, meaning it is “formed through a chemical process by human agency”; i.e. it is not derived from plants. This means that it can be produced – it is not dependent on agricultural and harvest conditions. Since the supply is only limited by the availability of the precursor chemicals and the availability of people to make it, fentanyl is exceptionally cheap and easy to make compared to plant-based opioids.

Powerful: Fentanyl is good at its job. It is a highly effective and efficient pain reliever. It is 50-100 times stronger than morphine. All the properties are amplified, so it takes a lot less fentanyl to get the same effect as morphine or heroin. That has many of implications, for instance:

- Just a tiny amount can be lethal, especially if you don't have a tolerance to opioids.
- Fentanyl takes effect faster and wears off sooner, making it highly addictive and harder to kick.
- Standardized dosing in a pressed tablet requires precise measures of minute quantities, something that is not guaranteed by illegal suppliers. The difference between high and die is often a few milligrams, or roughly a few grains of salt.

2. What is the difference between pharmaceutical-grade fentanyl and illicit fentanyl?

There are two types of fentanyl you need to know about.

1. Pharmaceutical-grade fentanyl is a legitimate medication produced by pharmaceutical companies that have developed advanced technology to control the quality and maintain the proper dosages of the end products. Pharmaceutical-grade fentanyl is tightly regulated and is safe when administered by professionals as prescribed. Deaths from overdosing on pharmaceutical-grade fentanyl are relatively uncommon and often involve misuse or tampering of medications.
2. Illicit fentanyl is the black market version of the drug obtained or made by dealers and mixed into pills, other powders, blotter papers and liquids, etc. in “labs” with no quality controls. The risk of illicit fentanyl is two-fold. Illicit fentanyl, often made in Mexico, is not manufactured to the same quality standards as the pharmaceutical fentanyl commonly used for medicinal purposes. The potency of illicit fentanyl found in items sold in illegal markets can vary widely from maker to maker, or even from batch to batch, and the buyers don't know the contents of what they are getting*. Fake pills are then being made, sometimes with inconsistent amounts of illicit fentanyl.
3. Fake pills are illegally made in garages, basements, and other clandestine settings by unqualified drug makers who do not ensure the quality or consistency of the dose. When batches of fake pills are mixed, each pill may contain a different amount of illicit fentanyl making the dose of each pill impossible to predict. These products are not regulated and there is no way to ensure consumer safety. Because of this, use of illicit fentanyl is very dangerous. Illegally manufactured fentanyl is involved in the majority of U.S. drug deaths in recent years.

*One of the other negative aspects of poor quality control is that at times, the “illicit fentanyl” is not actual fentanyl. Within an illicit fentanyl supply, there may be unreacted precursor chemicals, byproducts that form due to poor heating or stirring, etc. Also, the amateur chemists can change the ingredients (precursors) of the recipe to form “fentanyl analogs.” Pharmaceutical grade fentanyl is manufactured under strict, government regulated quality control standards so that precursor chemicals or byproducts that are left over from the synthesis process are removed as the final fentanyl product is purified.

3. What is a fentapill?

A fentapill is a counterfeit prescription pill purposely made to resemble legitimate medicines, but instead is made of illicit fentanyl or an illicit fentanyl analog.

Video: What is a “Fentapil”?

<https://youtu.be/f8GZ264ND78>

4. What makes illicit fentanyl so dangerous?

In addition to being extremely potent, fentanyl has a very small therapeutic index. This means that the amount of fentanyl it takes to have an effect is almost the same as the amount it takes to kill a person. That is why fentanyl is so carefully dosed and closely monitored in medical settings.

Illicit fentanyl also has a small therapeutic index, but it is manufactured without the necessary quality controls, so the potency of any given batch is an unknown variable. Combine this with improper blending when it is cut into powders and then pressed into pills, and you have a literal recipe for disaster: street drugs made with a potent, sensitive raw material that is unevenly distributed within the end product.

5. What is a lethal dose of fentanyl?

In toxicology, the lethal dose for a substance is referred to as the LD50, or median lethal dose, which is the amount that is needed to kill 50% of a sample group. Toxicologists point out that it is impossible to determine a precise LD50 for opioids because tolerance builds in lab subjects as the dose is increased. In other words, the lethal dose for any opioid is a moving target, technically speaking.

The DEA says that 2 milligrams \(mg\) of dry powder fentanyl is a “potentially lethal dose.” This general statement makes the point that a small amount can be deadly. In fact, the actual amount of fentanyl that will cause death varies depending on the person’s weight, whether they have used opioids before, their metabolism, their general health, and more. The amount of fentanyl that will kill a 110-lb person who has never ingested opioids will be different than the amount that will kill a 220-pound opioid dependent user. Therefore, a “lethal dose” may not cause death to everyone who consumes it. Conversely, a person could die from an amount of fentanyl that is less than the “lethal dose” of 2mg.

Caring for America

All of us at BARW should be very proud of ourselves. We donated $695 to Fisher House which allows relatives of injured service people who are hospitalized to stay free of charge.

We also donated $2,216 in 2022 to Bay Area Meals on Wheels. This is the largest donation ever donated in a year. Thank you so much for your generosity. BARW also gave an additional $150 for donations given in speakers' names ($25 per speaker).

Bay Area Meals on Wheels has also expanded their delivery service by offering frozen meals on Fridays to be used over the weekend when they do not deliver. About 60% of their clients request these extra meals.

They also partner with Freeman Library to deliver books and materials to their homebound clients.

As you know, Bay Area Meals on Wheels is a wonderful organization. We should all be so proud of the support we give them. Should you decide to become a volunteer, call 281-406-4961 or if you know someone who may need delivery of meals, call 832-240-6515.
